1 Brompton T-Line £3,750+

At 7.45kg for the singlespeed version, the Brompton T-Line is the lightest model of the iconic folder to date. It has a titanium main frame and stem, and a carbon fork and crankset. brompton.com

2 Peaty's Holeshot Biofibre Tubeless Tyre Sealant £19.99/500ml

Sealant with bits in seals bigger holes – up to 6mm in the case of Peaty's Holeshot Biofibre, apparently. The bits are biodegradable glitter. peaty.co.uk

3 Schwalbe Marathon Efficiency £60.99

"Schwalbe's fastest touring tyre to date", the blurb says. Better than the discontinued Marathon Supreme? I've got a set to test and will report back. schwalbe.com

4 Garmin Edge 1040 Solar £629.99

'Power Glass solar charging' extends the battery life of Garmin's latest GPS unit. It should last up to 45 hours during 'demanding' usage and up to 100 in battery-saver mode. garmin.com

5 Ortlieb Quick Rack £70

The Quick Rack attaches to a bike's seat tube or seatpost and to small brackets fitted to its seatstays or rear rack eyelets. It goes on and off in seconds and will carry 20kg. ortlieb.com

6 HipLok D1000 £250 or £200*

An anti-angle-grinder D-lock, the 20mm-thick steel shackle is reinforced with graphene, which should dull the cutter's blade before the lock fails. [*Cycling UK members get 20% off.] hiplok.com

7 Lezyne Matrix Air Cage £30

Stashing an Apple AirTag on your bike is a good way to keep track of it by iPhone – except the tag is usually easy for a thief to spot. This bottle cage hides it. lezyne.com
